Professor-Emeritus Edgar N. Durfee

THIS ISSUE of The Quad is affectionately dedicated to Professor-Emeritus Edgar N. Durfee, a member of the University of Michigan Law School faculty since 1911. During the teaching portion of his career, some six thousand Michigan law graduates commenced their study of law. We are the last of them, though obviously not the last to know his influence, since his excellent casebooks are in general use. Professor Durfee demanded much of us, we think, and still more of himself. On behalf of all his students, we would like to say, "Thanks for a swell job, and our best wishes always."

FROM THE WILL OF
WILLIAM W. COOK

BELIEVING, AS I DO, THAT AMERICAN INSTITUTIONS ARE OF MORE CONSEQUENCE THAN THE WEALTH OR POWER OF THE COUNTRY, AND BELIEVING THAT THE PRESERVATION AND DEVELOPMENT OF THESE INSTITUTIONS HAVE BEEN ARE AND WILL CONTINUE TO BE UNDER THE LEADERSHIP OF THE LEGAL PROFESSION, AND BELIEVING ALSO THAT THE FUTURE OF AMERICA DEPENDS LARGELY ON THAT PROFESSION AND BELIEVING THAT THE CHARACTER OF THE LAW SCHOOLS DETERMINES THE CHARACTER OF THE LEGAL PROFESSION, I WISH TO AID IN ENLARGING THE SCOPE AND IMPROVING THE STANDARDS OF THE LAW SCHOOLS BY AIDING THE ONE FROM WHICH I GRADUATED, NAMELY THE LAW SCHOOL OF THE UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN.

WILLIAM W. COOK

Believing as I do that American institutions are of more consequence than the wealth or power of the country; and believing that the preservation and development of these institutions have been, are, and will continue to be under the leadership of the legal profession; and believing also that the future of America depends largely on that profession; and believing that the character of the law schools determines the character of the legal profession, I wish to aid in enlarging the scope and improving the standards of the law schools by aiding the one from which I graduated, namely the law school of the University of Michigan.

Named in honor of Harry B. Hutchins, Dean of the Law School from 1895 to 1910 and President of the University of Michigan from 1910 to 1920, Hutchins Hall houses classroom and faculty offices. It was the last Law Quadrangle structure to be completed.

Hutchins Hall contains nine classrooms, typical of which is the one pictured below, each with a seating capacity of from 50 to 250 students. The classrooms are constructed with student tables and chairs arranged in amphitheater form on tiers sloping down from the rear of the room to the podium at the front. This structural arrangement permits the student to view the instructor and the black board without obstruction and vice-versa.

Two seminar rooms and a Practice Court room are situated on the second floor. The latter is a perfect reproduction, down to scale, of a full sized courtroom with bench, jury box, witness chair and tables for counsel facing benches reserved for bystanders. It is in this room that law students get their first real taste of courtroom procedure in moot court trials before live witnesses, jury and judge.

Professor Steinheimer conducts a Bills and Notes class in a Hutchins Hall classroom.

Faculty and administrative offices of the Law School are situated on the third and fourth floors of Hutchins Hall. A faculty library and study room is provided on the third floor with a capacity of over 25,000 volumes. Headquarters for the Michigan Law Review and Journal of the American Judicature Society are located on the fourth floor.

A display of class pictures beginning with the Class of 1873 is filed for easy accessibility in the Alumni Room on the first floor. Among other things it contains busts of prominent Michigan Law School graduates and deans.

Colored cartoons depicting legal situations have been set in casement windows of the first floor corridors surrounding the center courtyard. A plaque setting forth the credo of William W. Cook, (pictured on page fifteen) hangs on a corridor wall nearby. The Seals of the State of Michigan and the University, and the quill and scales of justice, well-known symbols of the legal profession, are carved on the outside of the building.

Portraits of famous legal scholars who have served the country, the state, or the University of Michigan adorn the walls of the larger classrooms. Planned with an eye to acoustical problems the classrooms are equipped with rubber tile flooring and acoustical plaster.

As a part of the School program, two major series of lectures on legal topics are offered annual in connection with the Law School curriculum. These are the William W. Cook Lectures on American Institutions and the Thomas M. Cooley Lectures. The Cook Lectures were established by the donor to disseminate understanding of institutions regarded as peculiarly American—institutions that have made notable contributions to the American way of life. On the other hand, the Cooley Lectures are designed to encourage the discussion of timely topics of a more distinctly professional nature. These lectures are later published and go on general circulation.

Building

The Legal Research Building, a towering structure which houses the Law Library and the various offices dedicated to the pursuit of legal knowledge, will always be remembered for its dominating magnificence. The four great towers, the graceful buttresses, the high tinted windows with their stained glass seals of well-known colleges and universities, and the other many details present a picture of unforgettable beauty.

Upon going through the main entrance, one comes into a vestibule, whence one may take the steps down to the lounges and smoking rooms of the basement and the tunnel to Hutchins Hall, or proceeding through the vestibule, one enters into the main reading room of the Law Library where one is immediately impressed by the physical splendor and the quiet scholarly atmosphere of study. In this vast reading room, which is capable of seating over 500 persons, are the open shelves which contain all federal and state reports, regional reporters, current statutes of the States and the United States, English Reports, annotations, encyclopedias, dictionaries, important legal periodicals, and citators. These volumes comprise only a small part of the total material available from the six levels of stacks and from smaller collections located in other parts of the building and in Hutchins Hall. The Library acquires approximately 10,000 new volumes each year, and on February 28, 1953, the Library contained 236,654 bound volumes, in addition to large numbers of pamphlets, reprints, documents, etc., which are not included in the statistics. The floor immediately above the reading room is devoted to thirty-two offices for the use of visiting lawyers, members of the faculty and other research workers. It also contains a few rooms used for special purposes. One of these houses the private library of Mr. William W. Cook, and is as nearly as possible a reconstruction of the library of his New York home.

Aloft on the fourth floor of Hutchins Hall are the offices of one of the school's most representative activities, the Michigan Law Review. Now in its 51st year, the Review serves a variety of functions. For the practitioner, its eight issues a year provide a scholarly survey of legal developments, giving pattern to the law's continual flux and assessing judicial and legislative pronouncements in terms of sound public policy. For the judiciary, the Review represents a higher court of appeal. For our own faculty, and for distinguished professors and practitioners across the nation, it affords a respected medium for communicating the products of their study and thought.

And for the students involved in its publication the Review adds another dimension to the legal apprenticeship of its student writers and editors. The normal curriculum requires, pretty largely, an exercise of logic and imagination upon materials gathered and put in orderly sequence within the covers of a casebook. Writing for the Review teaches the student the techniques of digging for his own materials, of sorting and analyzing them, and of creating a pattern if none exists.

Our examinations give opportunity for no more than a hurried reaction to a legal situation; the writing of notes and comments presents the challenge and responsibility of a reflective and documented statement of what the law is and what it should be in areas of current interest.

One thing more may be said. It is an extremely valuable experience to achieve a considerable knowledge of some area, no matter how narrow that area may be. So much of our formal education is, perforce, directed toward breadth that one is apt to miss the lessons learned from digging deep—the necessity of gathering all, or nearly all, the facts, the difficulties of digestion when the facts are gathered, and the inconveniences of knowing a great deal when one is attempting a complete and valid statement. All these functions add up to the estimate that the Review occupies in integral position in the study and practice of law.

RICHARD D. ROHR, EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

CASE CLUBS

The Case Clubs of the Law School are moot courts before which student members argue cases as though before an appellate tribunal. Students are paired and given hypothetical fact situations that have been prepared by members of the faculty. Legal issues are raised by alleging that the trial court has committed certain errors. The participants then prepare written briefs in an approved appellate form urging their position on the issues of law that have been raised, and thereafter orally present their appeal to a three-judge court. In preparing the briefs club members are expected to utilize the entire library resources, thus obtaining invaluable experience in "looking up the law". The cases are submitted and decided as cases of first impression and hence carry the students into a study of the entire body of relevant English and American law.

Although the clubs are student managed, the faculty provides helpful advisory supervision and the program of the clubs is officially endorsed by the law school. The schedule of arguments is competitive with the top contestants in the junior year competing in an elimination contest. The Henry M. Campbell

Two student judges and Professor Steinheimer sit as a three-judge court hearing oral argument in a typical Case Club proceeding.

Prize is divided among the finalists in this second-year competition. Many other prizes are given as incentives to clubs and counsel on the basis of their work at other stages in the competition, and credit is given in the senior year to all those who have successfully completed three cases in their club work.

There are sixteen Clubs, named for distinguished Michigan jurists. Each club is headed by a Senior, who has been chosen on the basis of his competitive work within his club during his Freshman and Junior years. As an assistant he has a Junior Clerk who has compiled the highest individual score during his Freshman year. Other Senior members act as advisors for the lower classmen, and, together with faculty members, sit as judges on the cases. Junior members also act as advisors to Freshmen and sit as judges.

One of the high points of the Law School year is the annual Case Club Day when the final competition before a distinguished array of judges (see picture preceding page) is held. In the evening the annual Case Club banquet is held in the Michigan Union and the Campbell Award and numerous other prizes are awarded.

STUDENT BAR ASSOCIATION

The Student Bar Association was founded four years ago by the students of the Law School to promote scholarship, to further interest in the practice of the law, to serve as a liason between students and the faculty, and to initiate or supervise student activities, both social and professional. The Association is affiliated on a national level with the American Law Student Association, which is under the sponsorship of the American Bar Association.

In order to achieve the purposes for which it was founded the Student Bar Association undertook a number of activities in its first years that have been continued through this year. These include the non-profit student book exchange, publication of the Law School newspaper, Res Gestae, and the Law School yearbook, The Quad. The S.B.A. Lecture Series this year included such notables as Robert G. Storey, President of the American Bar Association, and William T. Gossett, Vice-President and General Counsel of the Ford Motor Company. Among the social events sponsored again by the S.B.A. were the freshman mixer during the first week of school, the freshman-faculty tea, and the annual all-school dance, "The Chancellor's Court."

But the work of the Student Bar Association does not end here. A considerable amount of time and effort is expended each year in not only improving those activities which had been already undertaken, but also in planning new ones, some of which were put into effect this year, either partially or completely, and some of which will not be realized until a later time. In this area the S.B.A. expanded its book exchange so that departing seniors could leave their books for sale next fall; it instituted a court and jail visitation program, thanks to the generous cooperation of Judge James Breakey, Jr. of the Washtenaw County Circuit Court. In conjunction with representatives from the Washtenaw County Bar Association the Student Bar Association worked on a program for the institution of a legal aid clinic and lawyer referral service in Washtenaw County and undertook the mapping out of a program of evaluation of the faculty and the courses by the students. It also worked to expand its student-faculty relations program to include small informal gatherings of students with members of the faculty. The groundwork was laid for a program of interaction with the Junior Bar Section of the Michigan State Bar Association whereby students would receive information on summer job placement, and the S.B.A. would receive special articles for publication in the Res Gestae. A series of lectures by Junior Bar Section members was planned, to deal with the practical aspects of the practice of the law.

LAWYERS CLUB

Three students confer informally in the shadow of the Lawyers Club residence halls.

Established in 1924 and completed in 1932 under the terms of the will of William W. Cook, 1882L, the Lawyers Club was designed to provide a complete living unit for earnest law students apart from the artificiality and frivolity of the undergraduate schools.

A close examination of the Lawyers Club facilities reveals that the Club member has at his disposal the means for a well-balanced scholastic living program all located in ten acre tract. The Lawyers Club and John P. Cook dormitories presently house 350 men, while meals are provided for the same number in the spacious dining hall on the west side of the quadrangle. Lounge facilities include comfortable reading chairs, a large old fashioned fire place, latest magazines and newspapers, and large piano. A recreation room in the basement is equipped with ping-pong tables and a television viewing area. On the upper floors above the lounge guest rooms for members and alumni are available.

In external structure the Lawyers Club is of late Jacobean Gothic architecture and combines with other buildings of the Law Quadrangle to achieve the maximum of convenience, beauty, and adaptation to its purpose. The dining hall and lounge have high vaulted ceilings with designs in relief. The observant visitor to the dining hall will notice carved buttresses of the heads of famous jurists and legal thinkers adorning the ceiling where it joins the side walls.

The student rooms, ranging in size from single rooms to three room suites, are furnished in a comfortable pleasing fashion with newly installed fluorescent lighting making study condition ideal. The dormitories are constructed on an entreway system with rooms leading off the entries rather than leading off long, and sometimes noisy, corridors.

The immediate governing body is the Lawyers Club Executive Council composed of eight upperclassmen elected by the members. This group determines policy, acts as the disciplinary body, provides a social calendar and does the many varied tasks necessary to keep the Club and its facilities in top running condition.

Miss Inez Bozorth has been the capable and efficient director of the Club since its inception. In her quiet and efficient way she makes the Lawyers Club the best place to live on campus.

A wintry scene inside the Law Quadrangle.

fraternities

phi delta phi

Kent Inn, founded in Ann Arbor in 1869, was the mother chapter of the International Legal Fraternity of Phi Delta Phi, the first professional fraternity in America. The founders were John M. Howard, Arthur M. Montieth, and John B. Cleland; Judge Thomas M. Cooley was the first honorary member. At present, national membership is 41,421.

phi alpha delta

Phi Alpha Delta Law Fraternity was founded in 1902, the outgrowth of Lambda Epsilon Fraternity, which had been organized in 1898 by a group of students from the Chicago College of Law and Kent College of Law. Campbell Chapter was installed at the University of Michigan in 1905. At present, there are seventy active chapters, and thirty-six alumni chapters.

delta theta phi

Delta Theta Phi was founded in 1913. Christianity Senate was installed at the University of Michigan in 1912, within one of the three law fraternities which were later consolidated into Delta Theta Phi. National membership is 25,000, with eighty-two student and thirty-one alumni senates. Christianity Senate has an active membership of one hundred eight.

tau epsilon rho

Tau Epsilon Rho was founded nationally in 1924 at Western Reserve University. Epsilon Chapter, at the University of Michigan was founded in 1926. At present, there are twenty chapters throughout the country.

The Ann Arbor Surf-Board-Riding and Mountain-Climbing Society is a traditional organization of law students who enjoy singing. The date of its birth is unknown, but with the exception of the War years it has very successfully carried out its fundamental purpose: that of finding a satisfactory diversion from the study of law. The "Psurfs" is not a "top hat and tails" organization, but is rather a very informal singing group whose repertoire ranges from songs "we like to sing to songs we like to sing"; occasionally it fits in one the audience likes to hear. The membership is generally limited to 11 members, this year being an exception with a membership of 13. There are also 13 directors, although one of the members is nominally the leader. This democracy is said to promote informality. It strives to live up to its motto: "Compared to the Psurfs, the Whiffenpoofs are definitely passe."

The Model Time Made!

There is more to making a natural-shoulder suit than meets the eye—to learn takes time. Not hours or days or week . . . but YEARS!

Our Wilton model is tailored by craftsmen whose mastery of this classic style covers a period of well over two decades. Thus, you can readily understand why it is so far ahead of most . . . why it achieves that air of quiet good taste that accounts for its marked popularity.
